Healthy Versus Unhealthy Relationships

In our lives, we have many different kinds of relationships with our friends, parents, teachers, and boyfriends/girlfriends. Remember that in any relationship, both people may need to compromise and work through difficult issues. However, sometimes a relationship may make you feel uncomfortable or even unsafe. Keeping the following points in mind will help you figure out whether your relationship is healthy or unhealthy.

Healthy Relationships	Unhealthy Relationships
Equality: You make decisions together, like choosing what movie to see.	Control: One of you makes all the decisions and is very demanding, such as telling the other person what to do, wear, or who to hang out with.
Honesty: You can share your feelings, thoughts, concerns, and fears with each other.	Dishonesty: One of you tells lies or hides things from the other person. Or even steals the other person's things.
Physical safety: You feel safe, and you aren't afraid of getting hurt.	Physical abuse: One of you hits, slaps, grabs, or shoves the other person on purpose.
Respect: You treat your boyfriend/girlfriend like you want to be treated. You accept each other's opinions, friends, and interests and listen to each other.	Disrespect: One of you makes fun of the other person's opinions, looks, etc. There's no consideration for the other person's feelings and thoughts.
Comfort: You feel great being yourself. You're okay with saying, "I'm sorry."	Intimidation: One of you makes threats like "I'll break up with you if you..." One of you might be afraid to disagree with the other person.
Sexual respectfulness: You never force sexual activity or insist on doing something your boyfriend/girlfriend isn't comfortable with.	Sexual abuse: One of you uses pressure or force to engage in sexual activity when the other person does not want to.
Independence: You don't depend on the relationship to feel good about yourself. You have other friends and hobbies, and you feel you can end the relationship if you need to.	Dependence: One of you thinks, "I can't live without you." There may be threats to do something drastic if the relationship ends.
Humor: You have fun in the relationship! You laugh a lot together.	Hostility: One of you is just plain mean.
